DAY ONE PROGRAM AGENDA: TUESDAY, JUNE 9, 2020

11:00 - 12:30 EDT

Harassment in the Workplace: Addressing Prevention and Workplace Culture

Liz Horvath, Manager, Workplace Mental Health, Opening Minds, Mental Health Commission of Canada

Effective prevention and management of workplace harassment is not focused on legal compliance. It requires more than training, reporting, investigation and mitigation. Underlying and systemic issues in the workplace that can enable and even perpetuate workplace harassment need to be addressed to build a workplace culture where harassment is unlikely and not tolerated. In this session, you will learn how proactive management of psychological health and safety in the workplace can be used as an effective method for preventing and addressing workplace harassment.

Learning objectives:

- Understanding the true impact of workplace harassment
- What to do when an employee is being harassed
- Effectiveness of reactive measures versus preventive measures
- How to address workplace factors to building and restoring trust
- How incorporating a framework like the National Standard of Canada on Psychological Health and Safety in the Workplace can help to address systemic and underlying issues
