GBA+ Considerations for Transgender People

Kai Scott, President, TransFocus Consulting Inc.

Transgender people face substantial challenges and barriers navigating workplaces, public spaces, and government services and programs. Their unique and often invisible issues are beginning to be considered as part of GBA+ analyses, but organizations are frequently hesitant or fearful of making mistakes. This session seeks to address these concerns by exploring:

- Five key areas where trans people consistently experience challenges
- How to identify and address data gaps?
- Nuances of consultation - what methods work better than others for trans people?
- Stats and stories of what happens when trans people are not considered
- Broad benefits of trans inclusion in policy and program development
