Professional Development

Duty to accommodate is constantly evolving and with Covid-19 the complexities have become even greater. Employers are making incredibly difficult decisions about terminations, temporary layoffs, and how to maintain safe and healthy workplaces. These decisions must all be made in the context of your duty obligations. Being proactive in your duty to accommodate is a best practice that will help to avoid liabilities, and costs for non-compliance. You also gain workplace productivity that results from removing barriers in the workplace and practicing true inclusivity. Join us and gain new knowledge, new skills and strategies to ensure 2021-standards in compliance.

- Understand the scope of the expanding accommodation challenge
- Get advice for emerging areas of complexity
- Stay in control of your Covid-19 return to work and work from home strategy
- Hear strategies for being proactive in meeting your duty obligations
- Discuss how to deal with specific accommodation challenges

Accommodating and Communicating about Episodic Disabilities (ACED): Workplace Challenges and Solutions

Dr. Monique Gignac, Scientific Co-Director & Senior Scientist, Professor, Institute for Work and Health, Dalla Lana School of Public Health, University of Toronto

Employers increasingly are asked to accommodate workers living with physical and mental health conditions that cause episodic disability, where periods of wellness are punctuated by intermittent and often unpredictable activity limitations. Episodic disabilities are challenging for workplaces which must comply with legislation protecting the privacy of health information while believing they would benefit from personal health details to meet a worker's accommodation needs.

Objectives of this presentation are to understand organizational perspectives on the successes and challenges of disability communication-support processes, including:

- Differences in cultures of support
- Misgivings of others and their role in communication-support processes
- Challenges when worker's do not disclose a disability and when disability is cast as a performance problem
- New tools and resources to improve communication and accommodation processes
