New Anti-Money Laundering Rules, Typologies and Hot Spots: Managing Change To Comply with Canada's Evolving AML/ATF Regime

Chris Randle, Director, AML/ATF Compliance & Deputy Chief Anti-Money Laundering, Meridian Credit Union

Matt McGuire, Co-Founder and Practice Director, AML Shop

As rules change so too do the various techniques used to launder money or finance terrorism. This session will look at recent changes in the rules and resulting changes in typologies and new and emerging red flags to be aware of.

- Increased scope to prosecute money laundering under the Criminal Code with the addition of “recklessness” in moving money on someone else’s behalf while being aware that there is a risk of money laundering
- Mandatory public disclosure of administrative monetary penalties
- KYC requirements relaxed for non-face-to-face transactions – original documents no longer required just authentic, valid and current copy
- IROC updated guidance for securities dealers
- Money laundering indicators for casinos to assist casino businesses in identifying and reporting suspicious transactions that may be related to money laundering activities
- Need for reporting entities to align compliance programs and processes to meet regulatory expectations
- Need to update legacy systems
