Creating Supportive Environments in the Workplace

Nicole Callihoo, Assistant Deputy Minister, First Nations, Métis and Inuit Education Directorate, Alberta Education

The Alberta Public Service (APS) is dedicated to providing optimum environments and opportunities to garner social support, connect with senior leaders and organizational systems, educate colleagues, encourage career advancement and advance the goals of our organizations. The Employee Resource Groups (ERG's) are part and parcel of our Diversity and Inclusion plan.

ERGs are voluntary groups that bring together diverse APS employees who share a common identity, characteristics, and/or bond or background. The primary purpose of these groups is to support diversity and further inclusion in the APS. Specifically, the Indigenous ERG - the Indigenous Employee Circle provides a supportive environment and network and:

- is dedicated to supporting Indigenous employees body, mind, spirit and emotion through working with Elders and practicing our cultures,
- provides opportunities to APS staff to learn about Indigenous histories and cultures and to bust common myths and misconceptions about Indigenous peoples, creating a safe work environment,
- has a guiding principle that every decision should result in sustainable relationships today and seven generations into the future, to help make the GoA a positive working experience for Indigenous and non-Indigenous staff,
- members listen generously and respect alternative ways of knowing, providing for open dialogue with the purpose of increasing understanding, sharing information, and building meaningful relationships in order to guide directed studies regarding diversity and inclusion,
- all circle members are encouraged to promote the goals and principles of the Circle. They will each take on roles to deliver on actions identified through consensus decision making,

The presentation will review the IERG network, its activities, and its supportive systems.
