Unpacking Intersectionality

Karen Craggs-Milne, Head of Anti-Racism, Diversity, Equity & Inclusion, ThoughtExchange

The Government of Canada has mandated for all agencies to apply Gender Based Analysis plus to programs and policies. Intersectionality is a term we are hearing and using more and more and yet there is still confusion around what it means and more importantly, how we go about putting it into practice.

In this session Karen, who is a globally recognized GBA+ expert and has applied GBA+ in a wide range of sectors and contexts, will provide an overview of the origins and meaning of intersectionality, why it is important to programming and policy and what good practice looks like.

11:00 - 11:45 EST

Panel Discussion

Intersecting identities Panel Discussion

Moderator: Karen Craggs-Milne, Head of Anti-Racism, Diversity, Equity & Inclusion, ThoughtExchange

The Role of Parliament in Gender Responsive Budgeting

Geoff Dubrow, Principal Consultant, Nexus PFM Consulting

GBA+ is part of a wider set of measures known as gender-responsive budgeting. While the executive branch has a role to play in implementing GRB throughout the four stages of the budget process, so does parliament. This presentation will focus on how governments and parliaments can be involved in GRB across the budget cycle, focusing on international best practices.

Evaluating GBA+

Jane Whynot, PhD, Partner, Goss Gilroy Inc.

- The articulation of GBA Plus (GBA+) as a federal government priority in the Policy on Results (TBS, 2016) and accompanying guidance materials;
- The importance of integration of GBA+ by the evaluation and performance measurement functions and contextualization of doctoral research which included a survey of the Heads of Evaluation (HoE), key informant interviews, targeted review of government authored resources linking GBA+ and evaluation, and case studies;
- The necessary conditions that extend across awareness of programs/organizations of the requirement to integrate GBA+, the reach of stakeholders promoting this message and the consideration of equity-seeking groups, resulting capacity changes and the benefits accrued;
- The complex configurations present within federal government organizations as they integrate GBA+ within their unique contexts; and
- Some of the shortcomings of GBA+ as an approach given world events emphasizing the importance of equity, diversity and inclusion.
