Managing the Risk of Climate Change and Extreme Weather Events on Key Infrastructure (and Your Own Organization): Evidence of Adaptation, Planning and Preparedness

Moderator: David Greenall, Global Managing Director - Climate Risk, Decarbonization & Resilience, KPMG International

Quentin Chiotti, Practice Lead, Climate Risk and Resilience, Matrix-Solutions Inc.

Vito Mangialardi, Senior Manager Business Continuity Management @ Metrolinx, Metrolinx

Ryan Smith, Senior Policy Analyst, Environment and Climate Change Canada, Government of Canada

Ryan Ness, Director, Adaptation, Canadian Climate Institute

Robert Haromszeki, Director, Emergency Management & Reliability Compliance, Hydro One Networks Inc.

Business Continuity and Emergency Planners will have their work cut out for them when addressing the plethora of physical risks associated with climate change. From hurricanes, windstorms, and ice storms to floods, heat, wildfires, avalanches and landslides, you, as a professional, have a unique opportunity to effectively prepare for, adapt to and mitigate the dramatic effects of extreme weather and climate change.

This session will focus on the impact of extreme weather and climate change on critical infrastructure like transit, electricity, and communications. Questions arise: How will providers of critical infrastructure and services be impacted and how will this impact affect you and your business? In addition, how are weather forecasts and climate change projections being used when initiating BCP and EM plans?

Benefit from deep insights on major issues including:

- BCP & EM best practices that these key utilities / agencies employ that are transferable to your own organization
- The ability of key service providers to maintain critical infrastructure during and after extreme weather events, and
- The preparedness of owners of critical infrastructure to respond to future risks associated with the physical impacts from climate change
- How the EMBC team at Hydro One is changing as a result of climate change
