St. Theresa Point First Nation Housing Story

Raymond Flett, Housing Authority Board Member, St. Theresa Point First Nation Housing Authority

The session will provide participants with a broad perspective of St Theresa Point First Housing Program and its challenge to provide adequate housing. The story is important to pass on to the general society about the challenges that the first nation encounters. Hopefully, in this session we will be able to start pointing in the right direction to find suitable solutions in developing adequate housing for the first nation. St Theresa Point First Nation is a remote first nation accessible by air 10 months of the year and approximately 2 months of ice road in the winter season.

Housing Capacity Development on FN

Stan Knight, Project Manager, Zachary Knight Enterprises

Current issues facing FN when dealing with housing assets

- Code compliance inspection during course of construction to ensure compliance with building code
- Plan reviews before building
- Lack of home inspectors for repair inspections
- Lack of estimating skills
- Lack of project management skills to oversee work that is being done
- Crooked contractors who overcharge or don't do a good job
- Crooked suppliers who supply crappy materials or overcharge
- Homeowners with a lack of knowledge of basic home maintenance
- Bottomless pit of training / train then leave / back to square one

Mold Resistant Homes: Lessons From the Far-North

Trevor Trainor, President, Bawating Building Science

Lessons from the Far North:

- Lesson 1: Addressing moisture control must be our first priority
- Lesson 2: Air leakage condensation is the primary source of moisture in the far north
- Lesson 3: Building air tightness is the primary defense against air leakage condensation
- Lesson 4: Exterior insulation is an effective defense against air leakage condensation
- Lesson 5: Ventilation is an effective defense against air leakage condensation Bonus

We need better building design and construction quality in the Far North and this will result in higher upfront costs but lower costs in long-term
